The TFL brethren drinks a toast, led by former member John Sweeney, during a rollicking party at Darwin's.

Domino's Pizza delivers.

Is there a better way to sum up the highlight of the TFL's 6th convention? It wasn't a mountaintop rescue, but it was as funny as that would have been dramatic.

Four misguided, panting hikers taking a back route down the mountain and winding up 7 miles from their base, then needing to pay off a pizza delivery man to take one guy in the car and go let the others know where to pick them up.

A classic case of misjudging (or more to the point, completely neglecting) the "conical nature of the mountain," as Taylor put it. The pictures will be ready soon.

The second highlight was reunion night at Darwin's, one of the damndest parties you've ever seen. Red-hots all around, and tales from the past that got taller with the telling - both aspects courtesy of John Sweeney.

Draft night was the usual, best night on the fantasy calendar, but the Sunday sports bar orgy was a letdown. Too congested and smoky for some, with a few people fighting the onset of a cold. Well, you can't please everyone.

Mike Taylor won the inaugural TFL Derby on Saturday, pocketing first prize comfortably, with Wit Tuttell second. In the second of the two preliminary heats, Steve Katz collapsed at the starting line with a pulled calf.

By Monday, he was feeling improved enough to boast he could take Sain and Bingham even at 90 percent. "And watch your butts in Central Park next year," he said, referring to New York being one of the suggestions for next year's convention.
