Barbarino Division declares a winner in Denver, recount or not

By Pushpin Papoo
TFL Today

It's not like the Denver Pyles don't get enough pub, but we thought it incumbent upon us to point out that they clinched the Barbarino Division championship this week with their victory over Willow.

At this writing we are not sure if that's the earliest a team has ever clinched its division or conference (in the pre-division days), but it doesn't seem right not to give an 8-3 record its due.

The accomplishment, which escaped a recount, wasn't without controversy, however, as claims arose that owner Mike Taylor had pilfered parts of Steve Katz's draft notes while rooming with him in Anchorage. Taylor has vigorously denied this, but our source is God, so we went with it. The Big Guy didn't accuse Taylor outwardly of anything untoward, but made a somewhat loaded comment that initially fostered the mini-scandal.

Katz won yet another Monday night squeaker, using a Gannon-to-Brown score in the game's final minute and a half to overcome Dugway. Now Baltimore faces East Hartford in a matchup of teams that have clawed their way to 6-5 (the Barons started 1-4; the Ex'mos 1-5).

Despite three games being left, this game may be for the final playoff spot. The loser can still win out and finish 8-6. On the other hand, if the Barons win, they approach rarified air. They can either tie Narcoossee, Dutch Harbor or both for the Horshack lead if both those teams lose, or, if Narcoossee wins, they can set up a showdown with the Apes next week for first place.

If the Ex'mos win, they are no worse than a game out of first in the Kotter, and tied if Flint and Lackawanna both lose.

Got all that? Good, because by the time Commissioner Katz gets through sorting out the playoff muddle, he's going to wish he had an easier job, like a judgeship in Florida.

Moving on, since nobody (ahem, ahem) wrote a Half-Ass Awards story, we think it should be pointed out that Limerick may have earned the "Bring My People Back" award by having all three of his drafted running backs on injured reserve.

Marshall Faulk down, Trung Canidate up. Trung Canidate down, Stanley Pritchett up.

Olandis Gary down, Mike Anderson up. You already knew that one.

Ricky Williams down, Chad Mor-ton up.

"Narcoossee usually kills quarterbacks," Loons owner Mike Bourque muttered. "With me, it's running backs. They're dropping like chads."

Flint and Denver meet this week in a battle of division leaders, which we probably should at least mention despite it not having much bearing on either one's potential playoff positioning.
