Destiny calls early

The art of the deal (tick, tick, tick)

By Yesac Nagorb

Dutch Harbor Truth

Dutch Harbor Dawgs owner Casey Brogan was dozing fitfully Sunday when the phone rang at 8:11 a.m. (Alaska Standard World Atomic Clock Time) in his east Anchorage home on Kinnikinnick Street.

Wondering incredulously who would have the audacity to call at such an ungodly hour, Brogan lurched out of bed and stumbled into the kitchen to check the machine. Sitting at the kitchen table was his not-too-soon-but-eventual-father-in-law-to-be Steve, who along with his wife was visiting his daughter Kirsten and Brogan.

"Did you catch who called?" Brogan asked.

"Someone asking about making a deal of some sort," Steve replied, staring butch knives and trying to feign indifference at the same time.

Panic-stricken, Brogan hit play while turning the machine down as low as it would go and hoping Steve hadn't heard more than he was letting on.

With relief and elation, Brogan realized the caller was Donny Carlock and not one of his more ne'er-do-well associates. Carlock wanted to deal Cris Carter or Tim Brown, not a brick of hash or a bag of the mugambi. Carlock had told Brogan to sign on or call to talk trade. But there wasn't much time. It was now 8:17 a.m. ASWACT, and the clock was ticking.

Brogan

Carlock

Brogan snatched at the phone and dialed Carlock's number — only to be reminded by the long-distance operator that he had failed to pay the bill. And it was now looking like it might cost him more than money. Slamming down the phone and muttering obscenities, he considered his options. All two of them. The Unbuilder had accidentally cut the phone line to the computer, so the Internet service at 1407 Kinnikinnick Street was out. That left only one.

It was 8:20 a.m. ASWACT. The computer and phone at the Anchorage Daily News, mere blocks away, were his only hope. Bolting for the door while explaining lamely to Steve, "Uh, I got to go to work for a bit," Brogan bounded down the steps through the crepuscular light and roborant air of a November morning in Alaska. The explanation could wait.

Tick, tick, tick...

Sprinting on the snowbank toward DeBarr Road's intermittent oncoming traffic, Brogan wondered idly if he would be delayed by a policeman wondering what crime he had just committed. Luck, however (as is it's habit), was on his side.

Short of breath and shortly before 8:30 a.m. ASWACT, Brogan took the steps two at a time as he dashed up the stairs for his desk, where he found his computer cold and unanimated, much like a woman being chatted up by a TFL owner who will remain nameless. Turning to the next tube, he found it was turned on — much like a woman being chatted up by Brogan — and fired up the Internet, only to find his way blocked by a password.

Uttering a password passed down from his father — God damn dirty motherfucking cocksucking son of a bitch — Brogan returned to his tube and waited while the evil box flickered to life. It was 8:28 a.m. ASWACT.

"donny!?" 8:29:15 ASWACT.

"DONNY!" 8:29:27 ASWACT.

"yes, yes" came ever-cool Donny's reply at 8:30:30 ASWACT.

"casey, give me a number to call you if interested" at 8:31:28 ASWACT.

And then it got interesting. Donny wanted Ahman Green. But Brogan wasn't about to surrender the first former Cornhusker running back to ever successfully make the jump to the pros without having to jump bail.

Brogan: "I want Tim Brown." Carlock: "And I want Ahman Green."

Brogan: "Can't do it. Staley or Hearst." Tick, tick, tick...

Inside the numbers

Getting the most out of entire roster

It was a typical week in the TFL: Ken Sain conceded his game at 1:01 p.m. on Sunday, the Pyles stared wistfully at the Newts' ATWO crown, and Charles Bingham itemized his team's performance to the utter indifference of TrashTalk readers worldwide.

In concluding his weekly report, Bingham couldn't help but cluck: "That's right folks, the Eagles defense scored 15 points for me today."

There were yawns all around. But down here in the bowels of the TFL Archives, where we're always on the alert for the statistical minutiae, Bingham's post caught our attention. In reviewing his team's performance, we noticed that the Oosiks D not only popped for 15 points, it also outscored every other player on his team.

When was the last time that happened, we wondered? So we fired up the TFL Stat Machine in search of the answer. Turns out it's happened twice this year and 35 times in TFL history.

Not an everyday occurrence to be sure, but not an exceedingly rare one either. And that's why we comb the record books in the wee hours of the morning — to find something rare. So we upped the ante. Had any TFL team's defense outscored the rest of the team combined?

Surprisingly, that's happened twice. The first recorded occurrence was Week 9 of 1992, when Dugway got eight points from the Chargers defense — and six points from the rest of the team. Amazingly, the Tubes won that game, 14-9 over Dutch Harbor

It would be eight years before it happened again. The Bagdad Newts got six points from their defense, five from everyone else, in the season opener against

merwin
mcdick

Narcoossee. This time, it was nowhere near enough — the Nose Apes won 84-11.

All this made us wonder about what positions lead their team in scoring most frequently. So we scoured game summaries going back to 1992 and determined, percentage-wise, which positions most frequently led their teams in scoring:

1. Quarterbacks: 37 percent
2. Running Backs: 21 percent
3. Kickers: 21 percent
4. Wide Receivers: 19 percent
5. Defenses: 2 percent

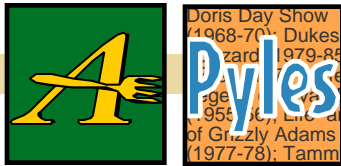

We were a bit surprised to see that quarterbacks comprised less than 40 percent of the high scorers, and that defenses were as high as 2 percent. But the numbers don't lie — two of this season's 70 games have been decided by defensive points. That's three percent of all games this season.

Just goes to prove that, despite the TFL's traditional bias toward quarterbacks, a Sweeney Bowl team needs a few other great positional players in the mix. And a productive defense doesn't hurt.

But even if you can't count on your quarterback, or your defense, there's one thing you can always count on:

Charles Bingham will let us know who's scoring what for the Oosiks — week, after week, after week.

Anchorage at Denver

Latest line: Pyles by 7.

BEST GAME OF THE WEEK

Anchorage 5-5 at Denver 8-2 This is the only game of the week that doesn't include a team with a losing record. Maybe we should slaughter the entire herd. As with all cattle, the Pyles are huge. Denver 77, Kitchenettes 21.

Dutch Harbor at Dugway

Latest line: Dawgs by 9.

BETTER THAN MOST

Dutch Harbor 6-4 at Dugway 4-6 At least their combined record is even. Dawgs should be rabid after being Mossed last week. Dugway should know that vegetarians and football don't mix. Woe is Ken. Dutch Harbor 44, Experiments gone wrong 33.

Lackawanna at East Hartford

Latest line: Lancers by 16.

BETTER THAN SOME

8-2 against 2-8. It's like looking in a mirror. A mirror that apparently Reidy broke after winning his T-Rex. Looks like he's got four more years of bad luck starting with this week. Lackanothing 65, gnihtonacaL 56.

Week 11 Preview

by Slim Pick'em
Narcoossee Notice

In the cattle country where I come from it is the time of year when those young cows that have been designated as "veal" get taken away from the pack to graze on the great ranchero in the sky while some slob grazes on them. It's not a pretty sight. The cattle have a weird way of sensing what is about to happen. They start to act pretty peculiar. There's about as much whining and crying as when Ken has to watch a heterosexual couple kiss.

It's that time of the year in the TFL as well. Only the good and slightly-above-mediocre will move on to the playoffs. And only Dolan will be interested in the Pee Wee Bowl. What separates the bulls in the league who will go on to roam the fields having their way with all the heifers they please, from the dutiful steers who will be thumped into unconsciousness and then sliced into two-inch patties and shipped to low-grade Italian restaurants throughout the states? What separates those who are celled from those who are culled? Luck, mostly.

Sometimes you pick them based on size or physical characteristics. But usually, you just look at them. Winners know they are going to win. They have that look. And if you don't know what look is, just sit back, relax and wait for the big mallet. Last week I had the look. I was 5-2, 4-3 against the spread. For the year, I have no idea what my record is because this season is too long for me to pay attention.

Flint at Baltimore

Latest line: Bison by 8.

BETTER THAN THE TRADE

Flint is 9-1 and Baltimore is 3-7. I guess if you add up the win/loss totals, at least that is a positive. It was that type of number crunching that convinced Katz to make the trade. In an "Enough About The Trade Already" Upset Special, Trader Katz 29, Bison 28.

Willow at Alaska

Latest line: Oosiks by 1.

BETTER THAN A DENTAL APPOINTMENT

If these two were cattle, I'd inspect the heard for Hoof and Mouth disease. How the hell can Charles be 7-3? Now that is truly unhealthy. Rocky Mountain Oysters 33, Weasel donges 22.

Limerick at Narcoossee

Latest line: Nose Apes by 3.

BETTER THAN CANCER

These teams are averaging about 37 points per game. Maybe they just have been unlucky, like good cows in poor pastures. Then again, maybe they just suck. Loser Loons 35, Nose Diving Apes 33.

team at team

Latest line: Gators by 6.

BETTER CALL A PRIEST

These teams are averaging nearly 50 points per game. Unfortunately that is combined. It would be a disgrace to bovines everywhere to call them cows. They are like oversized moles exposed to intense sunlight. Call the exterminator. Gagging Gators 22, Necrophylic Newts 18.

Inside the TFL

Hold the phone, Bingham

Moments after he beat the woeful Arctic Gators, Alaska owner Charles Bingham proudly walked in to the interview room for his postgame news conference.

Before the media could question Bingham about the health of quarterback Peyton Manning, Chas sprung his own question: "Have we clinched a playoff spot yet?"

Bingham is feeling mighty good about his 7-3 Oosiks. I don't know why. Any owner with a bit of insight would know he has nothing to be proud of yet.

The Oosiks have a four-game winning streak. If you look inside that streak you'll see it has come at the expense of some of the worst teams in the league.

It began with a win over Bagdad (No. 14 in the Power Poll), then East Hartford (No. 12), followed by Dugway (No. 7) and finally Arctic (No. 13).

Three of the four wins have come against the three worst teams in the league this year.

scoop bias

Quit sticking out your chest and smiling Charles. Everyone else is beating the Newts, Ex'Mos and Gators too. Oh, and look ahead on your schedule. You'll see dates with Lackawanna (No. 1 in the Power Poll) and Denver (No. 3).

The Oosiks have not clinched a playoff berth. The only team in the TFL to have reserved a spot in the Sweeney Bowl Tournament is the Flint Bison.

The Denver Pyles and Lackawanna Lancers can do so this week with a victory, or if all four teams with six losses lose.

Yes, even the awful Newts, dead last in the Power Poll, can still make the playoffs. But it appears to do so, they'll have to rely on their defense because Bagdad's offense struggles to reach 30 points each week.

■ SAY WHAT? Tick, tock, shut up about the clock. Week 10 of the 2001 season will forever be known as the Great Clock Controversy. But, Commissioner Ken Sain could only scratch his head in wonder at who it was bitching the most about his decision to allow the Flint-Dutch Harbor trade.

None other than Baltimore's Steve Katz. Yes, the same Steve Katz who has turned in a request for a transaction after the midnight deadline (according to the TFL web site's time stamp) not once, but twice this year.

And both times, Commission Sain allowed the transactions to go through.

One of those deals cost Sain the running back he wanted (Michael Pittman).

"Steve has a lot of nerve jumping on my case about allowing a deal to go through, which was in on time, when he's been late and I let his moves go through," Sain said.

"But, I guess that is what makes Steve Steve."

■ 1997 REVISITED: Stop me if this sounds familiar. One team starts the year looking like it can't be beat. They're scoring tons of points and everyone concedes they have the best team in the league.

The 2001 Lancers? Nope, the 1997 Experiments. With four weeks to play in 1997, it appeared no one was going to catch Dugway for the points scoring title. And yet, slowly, Dutch Harbor did just that to pass the Tubes on the final week and claim that title by a mere four points.

Take a close look at this week's standings. Despite Lackawanna's perceived superiority, the Dutch Harbor Dawgs have closed to within 33 points of the Lancers in the points scoring race.

And there's still four weeks to be played. Can the Dawgs do it?

In 1997, Dutch Harbor trailed Dugway by 40 points after the Week 10 games. So, yes, they can.

Carlock: "They're both coming off injuries. They scare me." Brogan: "They both ran for over 140 yards last week!"

Carlock: "How many touchdowns do they have?" Tick, tick, tick... Brogan: "Uh, how 'bout those Yankees?"

Carlock: "That's what I thought."

Brogan: "C'mon Donny, we're running outta time here. Work with me." Carlock: "Man, I dunno."

Brogan: "C'mon Donny, it's a fair deal! We're running outta time here!" Tick, tick, tick...

Carlock: "Can't we talk about this later? I gotta get my bets down."

Brogan: "No! This is the last day to make trades!"

Carlock: "Man, I just don't know." Tick, tick, tick...

Brogan: "Donny, c'mon buddy, pull the trigger! We're running outta time!"

Carlock: "I dunno..." Tick, tick, tick...

Brogan: "OK, what if I throw in Toomer. His numbers are almost as good as Brown's!"

Carlock: "Former Michigan man. Hmm. I like that." Brogan: "DONNY, WE GOTTA DO THIS NOW! WE'RE RUNNING OUTTA TIME!!!"

Carlock: "I'm not much of a Kerry Collins fan, though." Tick, tick, tick...

Brogan: "DONNNNNNNYYYYYYY!!!! COME ON!!!!!"

Carlock: "Hey Tina, do you think the Lions are gonna cover the spread?"

Tick, tick, tick...

Brogan: "DUDE, WE HAVE GOT TO DO THIS NOW IF WE'RE GONNA DO IT!" Tick, tick, tick...

Carlock: "Hey, how's the weather up there?" Brogan: "DOOOOOOOON-NNNNNNNNNNYYYYYYYYYYYY!!!! NNNNOOOOWWWW!!!"

Carlock: "Did Tick, tick, tick... you Tick, tick, tick... know Tick, tick, tick... Green Tick, tick, tick... is Tick, tick, tick... my Tick, tick, tick... favorite Tick, tick, tick... color?" Brogan: "NNNNNOOOOOOOOOOWWWW!!!"

Carlock: "Ah, all right. I gotta get my bets down. Later, Case."

All that was left for Brogan to do was figure out how to explain this all to his not-too-soon-but-eventual-father-in-law-to-be Steve...
